

TEMPUS – THE TEMPLE OF TIME

September 5 – 9, Raffles City Convention Centre, Singapore

For the second time since its inauguration in 2004, TEMPUS, an exclusive exhibit that promotes haute horology and inspires timepiece-lust, will come to Singapore. Although TEMPUS is a travelling exhibit that includes dates in horology's hub, Geneva, and New York, Singapore will be the only Southeast Asian stop.

The Singapore show, a partnership between watch retailers The Hour Glass and Antiquorum, the world's largest specialist watch auctioneer, will give watch aficionados a chance to view multiple world firsts like the showcase of 35 one-of-a-kind masterpieces commissioned by Prince Albert of Monaco and a world premier by Richard Mille, who will present a large clockwork driven Planetarium-Tellurium, the most accurate time-keeping device of its kind ever made - a masterpiece that was seven years in the making.

This year's theme, "Setting The World Stage For A New Revolution In The Movement Of Contemporary Horological Art", will see

55 luxury brands represented, constituting the biggest ever congregation of marquee watchmakers in Asia.

TEMPUS will also unveil its commemorative collection featuring an All-Black range from Audemars Piguet, and other celebratory timepieces from the manufactures of De Bethune, Hublot, Jaeger Le-Coultre, Richard Mille, SINN and TAG Heuer.

Prestigious names such as Cartier, Harry Winston and Omega will each donate a unique timepiece, to be auctioned in Monaco in late September, in order to raise funds for the research on Duchenne muscular dystrophy.

For insightful debates and discussions on haute horology, sit in for the CEO Forums & Plenary Sessions, chaired by industry bigwigs such as Thierry Stern from Patek Philippe, George Henri Meylan of Audemars Piguet and the founder of Antiquorum, Osvaldo Patrizzi.

But the show-stealing highlight will be the unveiling of The Hour Glass Museum of Contemporary Horological Art (MOCHA), the world's first and only watch and clock museum that will exclusively promote contemporary production watches. MOCHA's aims are to promote globally the art and science of timekeeping devices as well as the culture of contemporary watch collecting and appreciation. ➔
